Consumers Wanted: For an Employment Information Bridge to work it requires traffic to flow in both directions. If you are in a Consumer Directed Personal Assistance Program, you will eventually need to find a new Home Care Worker. And up to now you may have relied upon Friends, Family, an Agency or you may have chosen to put your own advertisement on the Internet (See the list of Internet resources on the PCA Employment Agency page of this newsletter). Therefore, to help you find the PCA Candidate of your choice, I urge you, to do everything you ordinarily do, to consider an Internet resource and to try

Concepts is Seeking Nominations for the Abe Zelmanowitz Humanitarian Award

Each year, Concepts seeks a humanitarian who has gone above and beyond to help someone with a disability. This year, we plan to award such a deserving person at our 2016 Gala in November. We write to you today seeking nominations for this important award.

The award is inspired by the story of Abe Zelmanowitz, Ed Beyea and FDNY Captain Billy Burke. Abe Zelmanowitz worked in the World Trade Center's Tower One as a computer programmer at Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield. He was very close friends with his fellow co-worker, Ed Beyea, who was quadriplegic. Both were in the office the morning of September 11, 2001. After the planes struck the towers, Ed had no way to escape the building in his wheelchair. Abe chose to stay with Ed until help arrived. Captain Billy Burke, knowing a disabled man was in the building, was making his way up the stairs to help them against all odds. Abe, Ed and Billy were all in the tower when it collapsed.

Out of the ashes of September 11th, the story of these three men has sprouted, and it does something amazing. By crossing boundaries of religion and physical abilities, they demonstrate with stunning power that that every single life is precious and that we must treat each other as such. They teach us to regard all lives as equal, and to live with strength, bravery and love no matter what the circumstance.

If you know of someone who is deserving of such an award, please submit your nomination to
Meghan at mtaylor@coiny.org, or 212-293-9999 x244.

WHAT: CDPAANYS and NYAIL Joint Legislative Day

WHEN: Monday, February 8, 2016

WHERE: The Well, Legislative Office Building (LOB), Albany

Your participation in this fight is critical to its success.

CDPAANYS Lobby Day Scholarships Available Apply Today!

CDPAANYS is thrilled that, for the first time, we are able to offer a limited number of scholarships for consumers who wish to attend our Lobby Day on February 8. Designated representatives are welcome to apply. The scholarships will provide a $15 food voucher for one (1) consumer and one (1) personal assistant, or a $10 food voucher for an unaccompanied consumer. We will also cover mileage, although we do not promise to cover the full cost of tolls, gas and wear and tear. CDPAANYS will cover what our limited funding allows.

To apply for the scholarship, please complete our online application by clicking here.

If you prefer a downloadable form to complete by hand, click here.

While we encourage everyone to apply, the most successful applicants will have a history of advocating for CDPA, either on a state, local or personal basis. All applications will be reviewed anonymously by a committee of CDPAANYS representatives and scored by a common set of standards.

The number of scholarships will depend on the number of applications. We will evaluate all applications based on merit and determine how far we can make funding go while still making the scholarship meaningful.

Overall guidelines:

- To qualify for a scholarship, you must be a CDPA consumer with a fiscal intermediary that is a CDPAANYS member or an individual member of CDPAANYS. Consumers who are employees of fiscal intermediaries are not eligible for scholarships. For a full list of FI members, please click here.
- You must be transporting yourself to Lobby Day. This includes train, public bus, or personal car/van. We unfortunately cannot afford to subsidize ambulettes or organizational buses.
- Scholarships will be based on a proportional division of expenses for all recipients.
- While CDPAANYS will look to make the scholarships meaningful, we do not guarantee we will be able to cover 100% of costs associated with gas, tolls and parking.
- The scholarship will be based on actual expenses. The individual will submit documentation as required by CDPAANYS for travel costs. This includes toll receipts or EZ-Pass statements, mileage reports and parking receipts.
- Individuals receiving a scholarship may not be employees of any FI.
- While more than one consumer from each FI is welcome to apply, CDPAANYS reserves the right to award scholarships in a manner that diversifies the recipient pool based on geography, FI provider, and any other factors at our sole discretion.
- CDPAANYS employees are not eligible for scholarships.

Home Care for Seniors: a Win-Win

Patients do better, families feel safer and aging in place is more likely with home care.

When health care professionals make geriatric visits, everybody wins, according to a recent study.

By Lisa Esposito Jan. 15, 2016, at 9:34am

What's not to like? Older adults with disabling conditions get easier access to medical care. Doctors get out of their stuffy offices to make new-age house calls. Nurses hit the road and see what patients really need. Medicare gets the promise of reduced hospital readmissions. Family members get more peace of mind. And most important, seniors get a chance to stay in their homes as long as possible. Home health care in the U.S. comes in many forms. Here are just a few:

Home Field Advantage

With today's portable medical technology, physicians who make home visits can do as much or more for patients than primary care clinicians in offices, says Dr. Alan Kronhaus, co-founder and CEO of Doctors Making Housecalls, based in Durham, North Carolina.

His practice uses medical labs that can deploy a phlebotomist to a patient's home to draw blood and send the results electronically to the patient's chart. Imaging technicians can do ultrasounds or X-rays in the comfort of the patient's home.

These aren't everyday patients who get home visits. "For the most part, we're seeing frail, elderly, complex patients with multiple, chronic, active problems and often some degree of cognitive impairment," Kronhaus says.

Many clinical advantages come from seeing patients in their own environment, Kronhaus says, like the ability to manage medications more effectively when the doctor can see exactly what's inside the medicine cabinet. It's also a chance to spot nutritional supplements that patients wouldn't have thought to mention during an office visit.

And it's an opportunity to address diet concerns, Kronhaus adds. "You can look into the refrigerator and see how it's stocked – if you've got a diabetic patient who has banana cream pie." Doctors evaluate the environment as well, he says. "We look for things like steep steps without carpeting, area rugs without nonskid padding underneath, electrical cords that could represent a tripping hazard, poor lighting."

To compensate for the "opportunity costs" of the doctor's transit time, patients pay a direct travel fee of $95 per visit. But, Kronhaus says, other costs are avoided, such as paid time off at work taken by family members to escort patients to the doctor's office, the round-trip cost of a wheelchair-enabled van or, in the worst-case scenario, the cost of transport by ambulance.

Doctors Making Housecalls is participating in Independence at Home, a Medicare shared-savings demonstration project involving a handful of home-based primary health providers throughout the country. The project has been "an unabashed success," Kronhaus says. "We've achieved dramatic savings and very significant improvements in quality of care and patient satisfaction."

Piecing It Together

Home health agencies fill a gaping need, but with economic and reimbursement pressures, many are struggling to survive, says Jane Kelly, executive director of the Kansas Home Care Association, a nonprofit trade organization. "There are four agencies out in western Kansas that are trying to serve literally hundreds and hundreds of miles of rural farmlands," she says. "And people can't get services because the agencies can't stay afloat."

With home health care, insurance coverage is often a hurdle. Patients who are not housebound may not be covered, even though getting to medical appointments can be physically challenging and transportation difficult to arrange. There's a high bar for reimbursement, and once a patient shows some improvement, he or she may no longer qualify for home visits. Yet access to skilled nursing, physical therapy and other services at home can prevent costly hospital readmissions and help patients avoid expensive long-term facilities, Kelly says. "Most people want to stay at home as long as they can," she says.

Family members do their best to support ailing parents by assembling a patchwork of skilled and personal services – such as help with toileting, bathing and dressing – through limited insurance coverage and government funding, or by paying out of pocket. "The options are, you piece it together," Kelly says.

On the Road

There's a lot of "windshield time" for nurses providing home care in isolated rural areas, says Terri Wahle, a registered nurse and director of home care at Geary Community Hospital in Junction City, Kansas. Wahle's team works with retired farmers and many other patients with often limited means.

For the nurses, Wahle says, a 10-hour workday may include three hours spent on the road, meaning less time to provide much-needed care for chronic conditions such as diabetes, heart failure and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Some homebound patients have several conditions.

After a hospital stay, supports at home may be lacking, Wahle says, even though patients' discharge plans say otherwise. "Do they have a bathroom they can get into with the walker?" she asks. "Are they able to fix themselves a meal? Are they able to get any food at all? Are they taking their medications?" These are some of the signs home health nurses look for.

Without regular access to home health care, some elderly or disabled patients can soon find themselves back in the hospital. "One of the things I've taken pride in for the last 30 years in home care is that we try to keep people in their own home for as long as it's safe and it's possible," Wahle says.

Quality Time at Home

When doctors or nurse practitioners go to patients' homes to make a thorough geriatric assessment, as part of a Medicare home-visit program, everybody wins, according to a recent study. The system saves money from lower hospital admission rates, and patients are less likely to enter long-term care facilities. With referrals to community providers and health plan resources, these patients tend to receive more follow-up care in the community and have a better chance of aging in place.

One problem with traditional health care, in which patients are only seen on providers' turf, is that health issues are dealt with in isolation, says study author Dr. Soeren Mattke, a senior scientist at RAND Corporation, a nonprofit research organization.

"When they go to the physician, they have maybe 10 minutes' face time," Mattke says. "So what often happens is the conversation focuses on what is the most pressing issue that day. But many other things that also have to be handled really never get any attention." Lingering problems from multiple conditions, while not immediately threatening, can worsen and accumulate, he says.

Comprehensive home assessments help uncover clues to frail seniors' health, Mattke says. Nutritional issues can emerge, for instance, like patients subsisting solely on canned beans. Like others, he remarks on the quantities of expired or discontinued medications patients typically have at home. "After a while, they really don't know what's what anymore," he says. Invariably, he says, it's the most essential medications that patients stop taking first.

Safe Respite and Handy Help

Adult day programs provide respite for family home caregivers so they can return to their responsibilities with energy and spirits restored. "Ninety percent of the people who call us, [it's because] they don't want to put their husband or wife or their mom or their dad in a nursing home or a long-term care facility," says Darlene Turner, director of the West Valley life enrichment program at Benevilla, a provider of adult social care and support services based in Surprise, Arizona.

The situation might be that the husband has dementia and the wife needs a short break. "She would maybe like to go do groceries without having to worry about him, or maybe go get her hair done," Turner says. "Or go have lunch with her friends."

For seniors who attend, these programs improve quality of life, Turner says: "Once they get here, everyone is given an opportunity to have an enriching day, to do things they wouldn't usually do if they were left alone at home." The daily fee for an independent senior is $75, and it's $80 for an individual who requires some staff assistance, Turner says.

Other services, like home-delivered meals, benefit older adults living alone in the community. Volunteers with Benevilla provide handyman services when needed: changing lightbulbs, replacing air conditioner filters, fixing leaky faucets. "We're actually able to send volunteers to their homes to bring their groceries, to pick them up and take them to doctors' appointments; maybe pick up prescriptions," Turner says. "And that way, they're able to stay in their own environment."

Senate Workgroup's Proposals Address Chronic Illness Through Medicare

Article By:

Kush Das

Monday, January 11, 2016

The Senate Finance Committee chronic care working group recently released a Policy Options Document continuing an effort that started with a hearing titled, "Chronic Illness: Addressing Patients' Unmet Needs" in the summer of 2014. The workgroup, which is led by Chairman Orrin Hatch, Ranking Member Ron Wyden, and Senators Johnny Isakson and Mark Warner, compiled proposals and feedback from industry stakeholders, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), and the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC). The bipartisan options paper outlines policies being considered to improve how Medicare treats beneficiaries with multiple, complex chronic illnesses.

When proposing the policies, the options paper is explicitly noncommittal about whether the policies will actually become legislation and notes that any proposals will have to be scored by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) to ensure that the legislation is cost-saving or at least revenue neutral. With those caveats in mind, the workgroup sets out three policy goals:

- Increasing care coordination among providers across the care continuum;
- Streamlining Medicare payment systems to incentivize appropriate care levels for chronic care; and
- Improving quality and care coordination while also becoming more efficient to cut spending.

To achieve those goals, the options paper suggests multiple policy initiatives broken into six categories and requests stakeholder comments.

Policy Proposals:

(1) Expanding Home Health Care: Nationalizing and making permanent the current Independence at Home (IAH) initiative that CMS is testing that uses physician and nurse-practitioner directed home-based primary care teams for beneficiaries with multiple chronic illnesses. The IAH initiative requires 24/7 response availability and incentivizes better performance and quality with lower annual expenditures. The paper also suggests removing restrictions from home hemodialysis treatment to better incorporate and facilitate monthly physician reviews through telehealth.

(2) Advancing Team-Based Care: Changing Medicare Advantage (MA) to include hospice care, remove restrictions on End Stage Renal Disease (ESRD) patient enrollment, and expand

Special Needs Plans to cover more beneficiaries. Also, the workgroup suggests improving care management services by creating a new high-severity care management code and policies that incorporate behavioral health in Medicare fee-for-service reimbursement and Medicare Advantage.

(3) Expanding Innovation and Technology: Adapting and expanding supplemental benefits such as non-clinical services, alternative care such as acupuncture, counseling, and transportation for chronically ill MA enrollees and Accountable Care Organization (ACO) patients. Returning to a telehealth focus, the workgroup suggests incorporating telemedicine more into MA plans, removing restrictions on telehealth coverage for ACOs, and utilizing telehealth for stroke cases.

(4) Identifying Chronically Ill Populations and Improving Quality: Developing quality measures for chronic care conditions and changing the CMS-Hierarchical Condition Categories (CMS-HCC) Risk Adjustment model to consider chronic care specifically by considering patients' number of conditions, behavioral health, dual eligibility, and historical data.

(5) Empowering Individuals & Caregivers: Encouraging care management by waiving beneficiary co-payments for care management services that create an administrative burden for providers, patients, and ACOs. The workgroup also advocates for more individual- and population-focused education and coaching by establishing a billing code for one-time conversations with newly diagnosed Alzheimer/dementia patients, expanding access through pre-diabetes education by incentivizing physicians through Medicare payments, and expanding online information and educational tools for chronic diseases on government websites.

(6) Miscellaneous Policies to Improve Chronic Care: In this last category, the options paper proposes: (a) increasing transparency at the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation (CMMI) by strengthening notice and comment requirements for CMMI programs; (b) studying medication synchronization of prescription drug plans in Medicare Part D to focus on coordinating and analyzing drug interactions, dispensing, and counseling; and (c) studying obesity drugs to detail utilization and impact, and analyze experiences of Medicare Part D prescription drug plans that are currently offering obesity drugs as a supplemental benefit.
