Consumers Searching

Consumers Wanted: For an Employment Information Bridge to work it requires traffic to flow in both directions. If you are in a Consumer Directed Personal Assistance Program, you will eventually need to find a new Home Care Worker. And up to now you may have relied upon Friends, Family, an Agency or you may have chosen to put your own advertisement on the Internet (See the list of Internet resources on the PCA Employment Agency page of this newsletter). Therefore, to help you find the PCA Candidate of your choice, I urge you, to do everything you ordinarily do, to consider an Internet resource and to try* www.ConsumerDirectedServices.com.

Finally, if you try Consumer Directed Services, please spread the word. Tell your friends and associates about this FREE service.

Medicare returning to an old-fashioned idea: house calls

Susan Jaffe, Kaiser Health News

4:07 p.m. EDT May 21, 2016

Looking for ways to save money and improve care, Medicare officials are returning to an old-fashioned idea: house calls.

But the experiment, called Independence at Home, is more than a nostalgic throwback to the way medicine was practiced decades ago when the doctor arrived at the patient's door carrying a big black bag. Done right and paid right, house calls could prove to be a better way of treating very sick, elderly patients while they can still live at home.

"House calls go back to the origins of medicine, but in many ways I think this is the next generation," said Dr. Patrick Conway, who heads Medicare's Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation, which oversees Independence at Home.

In the first year of the experiment, Housecall Providers of Portland, Ore., which had been operating at a loss, saved Medicare an average of almost $13,600 for each patient in the pilot project. Its share of the savings was $1.2 million. The house calls practice at MedStar Washington Hospital in Washington, D.C., cut the cost of care an average of $12,000 per patient. Medicare reported overall savings of $25 million in the pilot's first year, officials reported last June. From that money, nine practices earned bonuses totaling nearly $12 million, including a $2.9 million payment to a practice in Flint, Mich.

After three practices dropped out, there are now 14 around the country participating in the project – including five sites run by the Visiting Physicians Association.

Medicare officials are expected to announce the second round of payments next month.

By all accounts, saving any money on these patients is a surprise. Independence at Home targets patients with complicated chronic health problems and disabilities who are among the most expensive Medicare beneficiaries. But a key study, published in 2014 in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, found that primary care delivered at home to Medicare patients saved 17% in health spending by reducing their need to go to the hospital or nursing home.

In addition to Medicare's usual house calls payment, doctors in the Independence at Home project get a bonus if patients have at least 5% lower total Medicare costs than what is expected for a similar group of beneficiaries. Medicare keeps the first 5% of the savings and the house call providers can receive the rest. The doctors must meet at least three of the six performance goals, such as reducing emergency room visits and hospital re-admissions, and monitoring patients' medications for chronic conditions such as diabetes, asthma, and high blood pressure.

Under the law creating the program, practices could join only if they make house calls to at least 200 patients with traditional Medicare who have been hospitalized and received rehab or other home health care within the past year. These patients also must have trouble with at least two activities of daily living, such as dressing or eating. The health care providers must be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. They make visits at least once a month to catch any new problems early, and more often if patients are sick or there's an emergency.

"You never know what you're walking into," said Terri Hobbs, Housecall Providers' executive director. "This is a very sick group of people, with multiple chronic conditions, taking multiple medications and have a very long problem list." About half the Portland patients have some degree of dementia.

Yet the Medicare reimbursement for house calls is about the same as an office visit and doesn't cover travel time or the extra time needed to take care of complex patients. It's not enough to convince most doctors "to leave the relatively comfortable controlled environment of an office or hospital to do this sort of work," said Dr. William Zafirau, medical director for Cleveland Clinic's house calls program in Ohio, which has 200 patients in the Medicare pilot and plans to add 150 more.

A house calls doctor can see only five to seven patients a day. One reason is that a house call visit can take longer than an office visit, even after taking travel time into account. After Zafirau examines his patients, he also takes a look around the home. He may open their refrigerators to make sure they have enough food or see if medicine bottles are running low. He may arrange home-delivered meals or other social services.

"How people are functioning is often the best indicator of their overall health," he said.

The care can also extend to other professional services. Portland's Housecalls Providers hired a nurse and a social worker to serve as an advocate for patients who enter the hospital. When the patient returns home, they visit. "They make sure if patients are supposed to get an antibiotic, a hospital bed or oxygen, that they get them," said Hobbs.

Hospital admissions dropped so significantly that Hobbs expanded the transition team to serve house calls patients who were not part of the pilot program when they were hospitalized.

A similar team serves Medstar Washington Hospital Center's house calls patients, said Dr. Eric De Jonge, director of geriatrics at the hospital and president-elect of the American Academy of Home Care Medicine. "When patients go to the hospital there is very little contact from the primary care doctor with the hospital care," he said. "IAH is actually pushing back to reverse that trend."

Ironically, Medicare doesn't pay for the transition team even though Hobbs said it saves Medicare "a tremendous amount of money."

Congress has authorized the Independence at Home program through October 2017 but some lawmakers hope there is enough support to extend it nationwide. If not, Conway said his agency will not be able to continue it.

Kaiser Health News is an editorially independent program of the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Caregiver Advise, Record and Enable Act

Mon, May 16, 2016 at 11:20 AM

This letter is to inform you about recently enacted legislation, known as the CARE Act (Caregiver Advise, Record and Enable Act), Public Health Law Article 29-CCCC (attached) and effective April 23 2016. A general hospital inpatient must be given an opportunity to formally identify a caregiver (such as a relative, partner, friend or neighbor) who would provide after-care assistance. This letter will summarize the hospital's responsibilities to comply with this new law and reinforce existing regulatory requirements for patient designated family/representative participation in the patient's discharge plan.

OPPORTUNITY TO IDENTIFY CAREGIVER

The New York State Department of Health expects hospitals to develop a policy and procedure to implement the requirements of the CARE Act. The CARE Act requires the hospital to provide each patient or legal guardian with at least one opportunity to identify at least one caregiver prior to the patient's discharge or transfer to another facility. A caregiver is an individual who provides after-care assistance to a patient who will be discharged home.

Patients are not required to designate caregivers and caregivers are not obligated to perform after-care tasks for patients. The patient must consent to disclose the patient's health information to the caregiver if the patient wants to designate a caregiver. If the patient does designate a CARE Act caregiver, the hospital must include the name and contact information of the caregiver in the patient's discharge plan.

NOTICE TO THE CAREGIVER FOR PATIENTS DISCHARGED

The hospital must attempt to notify the caregiver of the patient's transfer to another health care facility. The hospital must attempt to contact the caregiver prior to a patient's discharge to his or her residence so that the caregiver can provide after-care assistance in accordance with the hospital's instruction to the caregiver.

INSTRUCTION TO THE CAREGIVER

The hospital as soon as possible prior (and if possible, 24 hours prior) to the patient's discharge must consult with the identified caregiver along with the patient regarding the patient's after-care needs at his or her residence. The hospital must offer caregivers instruction in all after-care tasks, taking into account the capabilities and limitations of the caregiver.

Instruction to the caregiver is only required for patients being discharged to their homes, not patients being discharged to other health care facilities.

The following written or verbal instruction to the caregiver must be provided:

1. A demonstration of the after-care tasks. The demonstration may be performed live by a member of the hospital's workforce authorized to perform the after-care task, or it may be a recorded demonstration.
2. After the patient and the caregiver have been given an opportunity to ask questions about the after-care tasks, questions will be answered.

The hospital must document in the medical record that the instructions to the caregiver have been given.

RELATION TO DISCHARGE PLAN UNDER 10 NYCRR § 405.9

The requirements for a comprehensive discharge plan to meet a patient's post-hospital needs are specified in 10 NYCRR § 405.9(f). The CARE Act does not change these existing requirements. Instruction to the CARE Act caregiver would not negate the need for home health care or other services.

All patients must be assessed for the need for health care services as part of their discharge plan. This includes, but is not limited to, home health care, long-term home health care, hospice, day care and respite care or residential health facility care.

Under 10 NYCRR § 405.9(f), a hospital must ensure that each patient has a discharge plan which meets the patient's post-hospital needs. A patient in need of post-hospital care must be assessed to determine the patient's post-hospital care needs, and the assessment must include an evaluation of the extent to which the patient's personal support system can provide for identified care needs if the patient is discharged home. Consistent with these existing requirements, the CARE Act specifically requires that, if a patient is being discharged home and the patient chooses to designate a CARE Act caregiver, the discharge plan under 10 NYCRR

§ 405.9 must include:

1. The name and contact information of the caregiver.
2. A description of the assistance with after-care tasks that the caregiver is recommended to provide.
3. Contact information for health care, community resources and long-term care supports to help the caregiver provide after-care assistance.
