Notes

Consumer Letter to CMS – DOJ – Feldman False Claims Case

We are disability rights advocates, consumers, community advocacy organizations, and lawyers representing people with disabilities in New York State and nationally. We are disappointed to learn of the settlement filed this week, under which the City of New York will pay $70 million to the United States, including $14.7 million paid to the Relator, and will tighten procedures that we fear will restrict access to vital Medicaid personal care services. As we stated in our amicus curiae brief filed in this case earlier, New York City was complying with the Americans with Disabilities Act, as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court in Olmstead v LC, with the due process clause as interpreted in Mayer v. Wing, 922 F. Supp. 902 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), and with other extensive legal precedent, when it authorized the Medicaid personal care services under scrutiny in this action. Whatever the technical violations involved in the paperwork for authorizing this care, the fact remains that the services were medically necessary and unquestionably delivered to the vulnerable populations for whom they were intended, enabling New Yorkers with disabilities to live in the community. We remain appalled that the United States chose to characterize these services as “false claims” or fraudulent.

Medicaid 1115 Waivers and People With Disabilities; Information Bulletin #344 (11/1/11)

Forwarded by Disability Rights Network of Pennsylvania

Friends -I will bet anyone out there a Philadelphia pretzel (with mustard) that over the next few years there will be major structural and funding changes in the Medicaid program. These changes will happen regardless of the recommendations of the Congressional "Super Committee" or who wins the 2012 Presidential election. States are pressuring for more flexibility to make changes in Medicaid. We have no doubt that these changes will determine who will be eligible for and will receive Medicaid services, how much and what services they get, and the way these services are delivered.

Comparing the Cost of Participant-Directed Services to Traditional Services FMS Conference November 15, 2011

Summary of Findings

- There have been a small number of conclusions from cost studies:
- Costs may be higher for lower cost people entering self direction as they are able to find providers and gain access to services
- Higher cost people reduce spending under self direction
- There is some evidence that the total Medicaid per capita costs may be reduced
- Participants spend only 85% to 95% of their annual budgets
- Self-directed personal care attendant services are lower cost than those provided by home health care agencies
- An unexpected consequence – employment opportunities are created for thousands of workers with minimal experience
