Updated 12/22/2015 - 9:07AM (2PCA's)

On September 16, 2013 the New York State Department of State accepted the Certificate of Incorporation submitted by Consumer Directed Services, Inc. under section 404 of the Not-for-Profit Law. A certificate that included the following statement:

To insure that the corporation remains focused on the empowerment of the people being served, as the service population grows, the corporation will expand the Board of Director Membership to insure that a majority of its seats are held by people with disabilities.

On November 12, 2015 the United States Internal Revenue Service determined that Consumer Directed Services, Inc. is exempt from Federal Income Tax under Internal Revenue Code Section 501 (c) (3).

To assist Consumers with the problem of finding new Personal Care Assistants, Consumer Directed Services, Inc. created a FREE Employment Information Bridge between Consumers and Personal Care Assistant (PCA) Candidates.

Consumers / Advocates

To search for a PCA Candidate complete the form at the following link Consumer / Advocate - Search for a PCA Candidate. When your information is received it will be enrolled in the email database, and posted on the website for a month, distributed to all of the members of the Consumer Directed Services database (Consumers, PCA Candidates, and a variety of other Employment Resources), and published in the Consumer Directed Services Newsletter for a month.

To just add your information to the Consumer Directed Services database, a Consumer or Advocate need only send me an email to elitcher@consumerdirectedservices.com and include your name and the text Newsletter Request. When your information is received it will be enrolled in the email database and you will begin receiving future issues of the Consumer Directed Services Newsletter and other emails related to the program's goal.

Personal Care Assistant (PCA) Candidates

To include your information in the Newsletter and email database, complete the form at the following link: Look for a PCA Job \(FREE\) - New York City Metro. When your information is received, your information will be published in the Newsletter for a month, and you will begin receiving future issues of the Consumer Directed Services Newsletter and other emails related to the program's goal.

Also, to access our list of Currently Available Jobs, please use the following link: JOBS

Previously distributed Newsletters (from January 12, 2011 to present) have been archived on the Consumer Directed Services home page. Finally, if you have any questions, comments, or recommendations about this service, or should you wish to remove your address from this list, please contact send an email to elitcher@consumerdirectedservices.com.

Best Regards, Ed Litcher

Consumers Searching

Consumers Wanted: For an Employment Information Bridge to work it requires traffic to flow in both directions. If you are in a Consumer Directed Personal Assistance Program, you will eventually need to find a new Home Care Worker. And up to now you may have relied upon Friends, Family, an Agency or you may have chosen to put your own advertisement on the Internet (See the list of Internet resources on the PCA Employment Agency page of this newsletter). Therefore, to help you find the PCA Candidate of your choice, I urge you, to do everything you ordinarily do, to consider an Internet resource and to try* www.ConsumerDirectedServices.com.

Finally, if you try Consumer Directed Services, please spread the word. Tell your friends and associates about this FREE service.

Doctors prescribe old-fashioned house calls when treating the old and frail

By Tara Bahrapour December 6 at 7:21 PM

Haydee Hernandez, 83, suffers from seizure disorder, degenerative joint disease and hypertension, and cannot walk well enough to visit the doctor. In many places in the country, the retired cafeteria worker would be in an assisted living facility. She is able to stay in her Columbia Heights apartment, surrounded by her plants and ceramic figurines, because her doctor comes to her.

Sitting in a wheelchair, Hernandez pointed to the spot where her oldest child took his last breath in her arms, two decades ago. "My son died in here," she said, vowing, "I'm going to die in here."

A study published last year in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, supported by other research, found that home-based primary care lowered costs as well as emergency room visits and hospitalization rates while increasing patients' satisfaction with care. Now, a group of doctors — including Hernandez's — is pushing to bring house calls to the nation's 2 million oldest, frailest and costliest patients, saying it has the potential to save the government billions of dollars.

Independence at Home was developed by a group of doctors around the country who were already making house calls to such patients. Although the patients needed regular monitoring, they did not need to live in a nursing home or hospital as long as a provider could come regularly to take their blood pressure, talk about their medications and check other vital signs.

While such visits cost doctors more because of travel and care-coordination time, they can save Medicare large amounts of money otherwise spent on inpatient and residential care. Working with the American Academy of Home Care Medicine (AAHCM), the doctors developed a program through which Medicare would share the money saved via home care with the doctors who provided it.

A three-year pilot program in 17 practices around the country was included in the Affordable Care Act and implemented in 2012. The initial results were promising, and this summer Congress voted to extend it another two years for 14 of the practices.

Last Wednesday, K. Eric De Jonge, co-founder of the medical house-call program at MedStar Washington Hospital Center and president-elect of the AAHCM, spoke on the Hill pushing for Independence at Home (IAH) to be included in the Senate Finance Committee chronic care working group, with the goal of making it available nationwide.

“This provides a path for us to care for all of America’s most vulnerable and frail elders in the environment in which they prefer to live and lower total costs for Medicare,” he said in an interview.

His partner and program co-founder, George Taler, put it more dramatically: Implementing the program nationally, he said, “would totally reverse the numbers for the sustainability of Medicare for the future.”

Such a scenario would save Medicare an estimated $21 billion to $34 billion over 10 years, according to an analysis by Jen Associates, commissioned by the AAHCM — money that would otherwise go to hospitals, short-term nursing homes and other costs.

In the first year of the pilot, participants saved more than $25 million — an average of $3,070 per beneficiary, according to the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS). The savings ranged between 6 percent and 31 percent across practices. Beneficiaries had fewer hospital readmissions and fewer hospital visits for conditions such as diabetes, high blood pressure, asthma and pneumonia. CMS passed $11.7 million of the savings to the providers.

Funding for house-call programs comes from a combination of the Medicare fee-for-service program, grants and private insurance. Results for the second year are expected soon.

In May, Finance Committee leaders said that they hoped to release a proposal to the public by the end of the year. Sen. Ron Wyden from Oregon, the top Democrat on the Finance Committee and a member of the working group, called IAH “an important opportunity for Medicare to lead a revolution in caring for people at home.”

Caring for chronically ill patients in their home is ideal, experts say. “If they’re at home, they’re in an environment that can expedite healing, for example, more natural light,” said Judah Ronch, dean of the Erickson School at the University of Maryland Baltimore County, which focuses on the elderly in society. Being at home also helps patients see themselves as “not a sick person,” he said.

Joyce Weatherly, 94, who suffers from hypertension, heart disease and osteoarthritis, sat in her Mount Pleasant living room last week, chatting with Taler, one of the doctors who came up with the idea for IAH.

Taler took her blood pressure and watched her walk unsteadily across the room, where her orange cat, Chester, crouched on an Oriental carpet. “When they tried to enroll me at that geriatric program at the hospital it was horrible. They took me from one computer to the other,” she said, adding, “It’s not just getting there, it’s waiting after you get there.”

Instead, the former government clerical worker waits on her couch for the home visits, which remind her of the 1920s, when her family doctor came in a buggy.

For her daily needs, Weatherly has a full-time assistant — a factor that could limit who is able to benefit from the program. Patients receiving home primary medical care must rely on a combination of family caregivers and paid assistants for other help, or Medicaid home help if a patient is eligible.

Patients older than 85 are the nation’s fastest-growing cohort, and as the massive baby-boomer generation ages, that growth will accelerate: In the next 15 years, the number of people ages 80 to 84 will leap from 5.7 million to 10.5 million. Experts have warned of a looming crisis.

At the same time, the medical industry has resorted to outdated solutions, Taler said, adding that too often after an acute crisis, patients are sent to live in a facility even when round-the-clock care is not necessary.

“It is so much easier to discharge a patient to a nursing home than to set up a home-care program,” he said. “Two-thirds of people in nursing homes probably no longer need to be there because they don’t need 24-and-7 nursing care. . . . IAH provides the opportunity to move these people back into the community or to prevent new ones from coming in.”

A national implementation could substantially reduce hospital beds, he said, with nursing homes taking over some of the medium-tech care, such as delivering intravenous medications and fluid, that hospitals now provide.

Not all primary-care practices would qualify — house calls require specialized skills, and doctors would need to employ or partner with nurse practitioners and social workers and be able to coordinate care with family members. Someone would need to be on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Those requirements, along with the growing number of older Americans, mean IAH is not likely to put nursing homes out of business, said Mike Cheek, senior vice president for finance policy and legal affairs at the American Health Care Association, which represents 13,000 nursing homes and assisted living facilities.

“Our businesses are most concerned about meeting the demands in the coming years,” he said, adding that if IAH were implemented nationally, some facilities might be interested in developing partnerships with participating providers, teaming up with them to help deliver some of the in-home skilled care.

But in some cases, facilities would no longer be required.

“Many old people in hospitals don’t need to be there,” Ronch said. “It’s not about serving the needs of the institution, but serving the needs of the people. It’s the idea that we can deconstruct the health-care system and reconstruct it to serve the patient in a way that’s fiscally and medically better.”

Tara Bahrapour, a staff writer based in Washington, D.C., writes about aging and generations.

Parents of special needs children to be paid caregivers in NY State

November 29, 2015 8:44 PM

Starting in April of 2016, the Social Services law will be amended in NY State to allow for parents of their adult child to be paid under the Consumer Directed Personal Assistance Program (CDPAP) , as long as the parent is not also named as the designated representative. This is a program where the consumer, i.e., the individual with the disability, can hire anyone he or she chooses.

The CDPAP is a statewide Medicaid program that provides an alternative way of receiving home care services, where the consumer has more control over who provides their care and how it is provided. Rather than assigning a home care vendor or agency that controls selection, training, and scheduling of aides, the "consumer" or the family member, friend or guardian directing his/her care performs all these functions usually done by a vendor.

The change was signed into law by Governor Cuomo on November 20, 2015 which amends the Social Services Law §365-f, subd. 3, L. 2015 Ch. 511, enacting Senate bill S05712-A proposed by Senator Simcha Felder. State regulations now prohibit only the spouse or parent from being hired as the CDPAP aide, but allow a son or daughter or any other family member, provided the family member does "...not reside with the consumer or ... who resides with the consumer because the amount of care the consumer requires makes such relative's presence necessary...."

The aide need not be 'certified' as training is done by the consumer and family. However, CDPAP aides may perform skilled care that otherwise only be performed when a person cannot self-administer, such as suctioning tracheotomies, insulin injections, administration of oxygen and medications.

What's all this mean for families? Many parents of developmentally disabled children are stressed to their maximum abilities when they have a child who requires 24/7 care. If there are two parents in the home, they often work opposite hours of one another in order to be sure their disabled child is cared for in their best interest. They do this in place of a group home, as they want their child home with them for as long as possible. After all most are happiest living with their parents. While the parents are very willing to do this for their children many find that by the time their child has reached the age of 21 and they are no longer in a school setting, they are the full-time caregivers for their now adult children. Where there were financial strains prior to the child becoming adult, they now find themselves bankrupt and on assistance programs. At planning meetings, advocates often hear from parents the need to work to support their family, yet they are staying home unpaid in place of a professional caregiver. There just aren't enough caregivers to go around. The solution for several states since 2011 has been to pay the parents; however, the Home and Community Based Medicaid Waiver program in NY has allowed for everyone in the family except the parents to be paid.

Parents will need to call their local Consumer Director Personal Assistance Program agency for their county. A good place to start is the Department of Health who contracts with the fiscal as the aide is not an employee of a home care agency, but is instead an independent contractor, who is paid wages and benefits by a "fiscal intermediary," an entity that contracts with either the county or a managed care plan to provide services authorized by that county or managed care plan. It is the fiscal intermediary that pays the aide wages and benefits.

"This is wonderful news for families all across New York State. There is no one who understands the complex needs and challenges of a child with a disability better than a parent," said Assemblyman Joe Morelle (D-Irondequoit), who co-sponsored the bill.

TTY Relay Service: 711

ICAN includes 14 agencies and can meet clients at over 50 locations throughout New York state where they can meet with people in-person. Call to schedule an in-person meeting. They can also visit you in your home if you have difficulty traveling.

Key facts to keep in mind:

- ICAN does not accept walk-ins. You have to call ICAN to schedule an appointment.
- Some of the locations are permanently staffed, and some are just locations where staff can meet with clients so there is nobody from ICAN there most of the time.
- ICAN will arrange for a home visit for anyone who needs it, so lack of a proximate site should not be an obstacle.
